

HYMAN JAFFE
ATTORNEY AT LAW

Dec. 7, 1915.

December 20, 1915.

Mr. Hyman Jaffe,
124 Delancey St.,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

I was very much interested in your letter of Nov. 20th and have intended acknowledging it long before this. I am very glad that you wrote me as you did. Your account of the situation is extremely interesting and informative and I am very glad to have it in my possession. If a credit union does not attempt to expand beyond the limits of a group of acquaintances it is probably not in any danger and no concern need be felt about it. If a credit union does branch out and make loans without collateral security to members coming from all sections of the city without anything in particular in common, there is certainly cause for concern. It seems to be, therefore not a matter of argument but one of fact. As I said before, I am grateful to you for writing to me.

Very truly yours,

Henry Hyman Jaffe, Esq., New York City

B.R. Hyman Jaffe
Director.

DISCARDED NOT READ
BY MR. HAM

Our friend Mr. Wissensfeldt has, in his correspondence with us, often mentioned his new intentions, overstates the case to you in your interview. Mr. Wissensfeldt's sense of pride reminds me of the personality traits of the well-known artist, Max Klinger. He is a man of the artistic type, the artist and writer, Max Klinger. Dr. Wilson, who was very sympathetic towards our credit union and cherished great hopes concerning its future, did not well until he was informed that the idea of a limited credit union and this novel